Q. Did the Nabumetone work?

PERFORMING A TEXT SEARCH:

To search for marks or text, click

Search

. In the search field, do either of the following:

- To search for marks, press the Spacebar.
- To search for text, type the text.

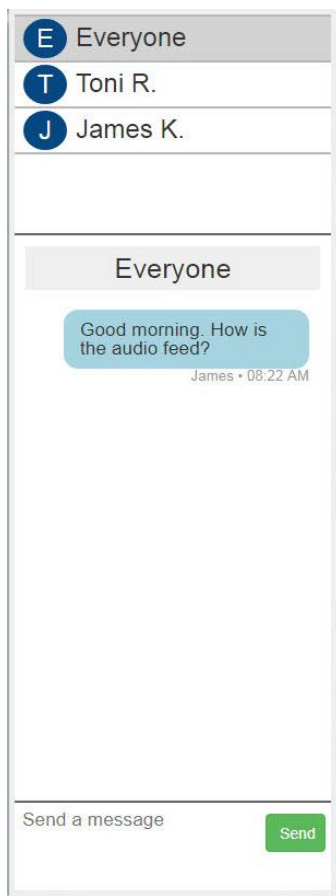

Click any search result item to move the cursor to that location in the transcript. Click  to return to the scrolling text. To hide the Search pane, click  again.

EMAILING A TRANSCRIPT:

To email the current version of the transcript, click  and then click . The email will be sent to the email address you provided when you logged in to the realtime session. There will be two attachments with the naming convention Transcript – year – month – day, one in ASCII (.txt) file format and one in LiveNote® (.ptf) compatible file format. The email feature is only available if the reporter allows you to save the file.

SENDING AND RECEIVING A CHAT MESSAGE:

To open the chat window, click .

Sending a Message:

To send a message to everyone connected to the realtime session, click on

, type a message in the Send a message field, and then click .

- To send a message to a specific individual, click that individual’s name, type a message in the Send a Message field, and then click . The name that appears in the chat window is the name that was typed while the individual was logging in to the realtime session.

Receiving a Message:

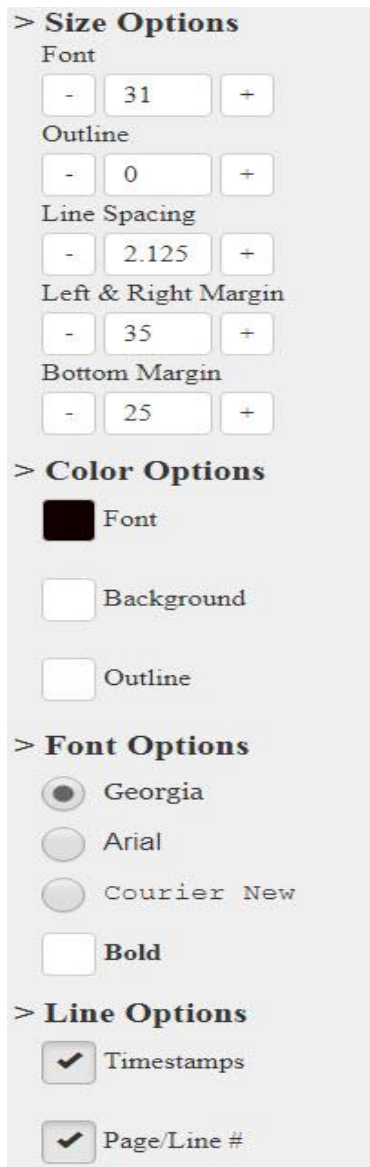

- If an individual sends you a message and you do not currently have that individual selected inside the chat window, a red dot will appear next to their name alerting you that they sent you an unread message. Additionally, a window with the message will display briefly in the upper-right corner of the Browser Edition display. To view the message, click the name of the sender.

Note: CaseViewNet Browser Edition does not keep any chat logs of sent and received messages. When the realtime session ends, all messages will be lost.

CART VIEW:

To access CART View, click  and then click the  button. In CART View, the caption text will automatically scroll in full-screen mode. To exit full screen, press Esc. Moving your cursor to another location in the file temporarily pauses the scrolling of the text until you click .
